About the Presenter

Dr. John Mundt

Dr. Mundt is a Licensed Clinical Psychologist who has experience in working with clients of all ages and from across the diagnostic spectrum, and whose training includes work in a university counseling center. He has been a Staff Psychologist at the Jesse Brown VA Medical Center (Chicago, IL) since 1992, providing both long-term and time-limited psychotherapy, as well as psychological assessment and case management for veterans. Since 1996, Dr. Mundt has been the psychologist in the Medical Center’s acute-care partial hospitalization program, with a focus on brief treatment of PTSD stemming from combat, sexual assault and inner-city violence as well as other types of trauma. His approach to treatment in this setting emphasizes intensive psychoeducation as well as aggressive case management and advocacy for veterans in the program. In his private practice, Dr. Mundt engages individuals, couples and families around a range of issues, including post-traumatic reactions.

Dr. Mundt is an experienced teacher, lecturer and trainer who will engage you with his expertise and practicality. He has presented nationally (in more than 40 cities) on the topic of mental health issues in returning combat veterans. He has been an Assistant Professor of Psychology in Psychiatry at the University of Illinois at Chicago since 1994. In this capacity, he has supervised and trained psychiatry residents, medical students and psychology interns in psychotherapy, diagnostic interviewing, and active case management. Dr. Mundt holds a Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
